

Some real estate company X has data containing the prices of property and other factors about the property.

The company wants to identify important factors that are affecting the price of a property.

Create a linear model that can accurately predict house prices.